Revised Price List for 1927 Covering Gladiolus and Iris

As there are a number of revisions in prices we desire to make we are issuing this abbreviated, descriptive list. Most of you receiving this list have our 1926 descriptive catalog to which you can refer if more detailed description is desired. Those who do not have it will gladly be supplied upon request.

We have made a number of reductions in price and on a number the price has been reduced 50% or more. The prices quoted are for good, flowering sized bulbs that have been stored under proper conditions to retain full vitality of the bulbs. Only clean, healthy bulbs will be sent to our customers which is vital if the very best results are to be obtained.

Culture of the gladiolus is extremely simple. Full exposure to the sun is imperative for best results. Plant the bulbs about four inches deep. If planted too shallow your plants will not stand up. Start planting operations as soon as the ground becomes warm and the danger of frosts is past. If a succession of bloom is desired, successive plantings can be made at intervals of ten days or two weeks. Keep them clean and free from weeds and see that the soil gets frequent cultivation. Be cautious in the use of fertilizer. If your soil is reasonably fertile they will produce good bloom. Pulverized sheep manure will be found very beneficial sprinkled over the surface after the bulbs have been well covered. In the early fall they must be dug and the tops removed close to the bulb. After they have dried, the roots and old bulb should be removed and the new stock kept in an airy, frost proof cellar. Frozen bulbs are worthless.

At prices quoted we include delivery where order amounts to $1.00 or more. A liberal discount for early orders where quantity is desired. We know of no other flower that will give as much satisfaction as the gladiolus. Try a planting and be convinced.

We have quite a number of varieties which we are not listing at this time. If you have any particular variety that you desire to obtain that does not appear on this list, please do not hesitate to write us and we may be able to supply you.

If you are now growing gladiolus we trust you will find some varieties in our list that you will decide to add to your collection. If you are not now growing this beautiful flower, do not let another year pass without sharing the joy that others experience in their possession. Plant at least a few and you will want to add more as years pass and their real worth is established in your own garden. The period of bloom can be extended over several weeks by successive plantings, thus prolonging the season of enjoyment and affording continued delight as new varieties make their appearance.

While we feel we have ample stock of most of the varieties listed, on a few of the newer varieties our stock is limited and all quotations are made subject to prior sale. We would advise early orders which will be shipped whenever they are desired or when weather conditions warrant.

IRIS

Along with the early spring blooming perennials we find the Iris among the leaders. For a wide range in coloring, delicate combinations of color, airy bloom, combined with unusual hardiness, we find the Iris in the front rank. They multiply so rapidly under normal conditions that it is possible to have a large collection in a few years from a very modest beginning. If you are not now enjoying their beauty, try a liberal planting this season. Some of the improved varieties are marvelously beautiful.

We are showing the rating in the column preceding the name of the variety that will be of assistance in arriving at comparative values as to desirability. We are carrying some that are not rated high but which we feel possess more merit than the rating indicates.

As with the gladiolus list preceding this we have made the descriptions exceedingly brief. More complete descriptions will be found in our descriptive catalog which has been received by most readers of this list. If you do not have a copy, we will gladly mail one on request.

In planting Iris, the rhizome, or enlarged root, should be placed very near the surface of the ground. The soil should be firmly placed about the roots to hold the plant in place. Good drainage, frequent cultivation, fertile but not too enriched soil will produce the best Iris for you.
